Coaching is about you...

*More you engage -
More you benefit!*

The International Coaching Federation (ICF) defines coaching as "Partnering with clients in a thought-provoking and creative process that inspires them to maximize their personal and professional potential".

It's a client-led, future-focused collaboration where coaches use powerful questions, active listening, and create a non-judgmental space to help individuals unlock their own solutions, develop awareness, and take action toward their goals, rather than giving advice or fixing problems.

Key aspects of ICF coaching:

- Partnership: A confidential, trusting relationship between coach and client.
- Thought-Provoking & Creative: Inspires new perspectives and self-discovery.
- Client-Led: The client drives the agenda, answers, and actions.
- Future-Focused: Concentrates on goals, strengths, and potential, not past problems or therapy
- Maximizing Potential: Aims to enhance personal and professional performance.

What it's not:

- Not Advice-Giving: Coaches don't prescribe solutions or teach skills.
- Not Therapy: It's non-clinical and assumes the client is functional.
- Not Mentoring: It's about unlocking the client's wisdom, not sharing the coach's.

Objective we are all gathered here for....

- ❖ To empower you to strengthen your leadership presence, navigate organizational dynamics confidently, and prepare for senior roles.
- ❖ Gain clarity on your leadership vision and personal brand.
- ❖ Build confidence to lead teams and influence stakeholders.
- ❖ Develop skills for visibility, strategic networking, and executive communication.
- ❖ Overcome internal barriers (self-doubt, imposter syndrome, etc.).
- ❖ Create an actionable career advancement plan

Leadership Style – Leading with Authenticity

- Competence (become the go-to person for a particular skill): Continuous learning and technical mastery
- Creativity (think out-of-box): Innovative problem-solving and strategic thinking
- Courage (be willing to speak up and out): Willingness to make difficult decisions for long-term benefit
- Communication (you cannot over-invest in becoming a better communicator): Multi-stakeholder engagement and persuasive messaging
- Compass (integrity is critical in a leader's job): Ethical decision-making and value-based leadership

Transforming deep self-awareness into your own style

When I was visiting India two years ago, I went to visit my mum, and she wanted me to dress up and sit with her as she entertained all her friends, neighbors, and second through fifth cousins, who were coming to visit. When all her guests came in, they ignored me. They didn't even say hello. They went to my mum and said to her, "You brought up such a good kid".

This prompted her famous letter-writing campaign to employees' parents. Nooyi wrote personal letters to the parents of her 400 senior executives, acknowledging their role in raising exceptional leaders.

A fundamental belief in collective wisdom that traces back to her Indian upbringing, where family discussions shaped major decisions.

Nooyi's leadership style is characterized by her democratic approach which involved her employees in the decision-making process.

You can't have it all!

Nooyi has been famously candid about the intense personal sacrifices and the "total, complete conflict" between her career and family life, challenging the notion that women can "have it all".

In her parting letter to staff, Indra Nooyi wrote: "If I'm being honest, there have been moments I wish I'd spent more time with my children and family."

She's said in an interview with Freakonomics Radio "You know, you have to cope, because you die with guilt. You just die with guilt."

Choices - Choices - Choices

Indra Nooyi famously debunks the myth of perfect "work-life balance," advocating instead for a constant "juggling act" of priorities, where you choose what deserves your energy daily, accepting that some days work wins and other days life does.

She stresses radical prioritization, relying on support systems, setting boundaries, and a "no-regret" policy focused on family moments over minor work details, recognizing you can't do everything perfectly.

Key principles of her approach:

- Juggling, Not Balancing: It's a continuous process of shifting focus, not achieving perfect equilibrium.
- Radical Prioritization: Decide what truly matters today, whether it's a work deadline or a child's event, and focus energy there.
- The "No-Regret" Policy: Focus on family moments that your kids will remember, rather than staying late for a project at work that won't be recalled.
- Support Systems are Crucial: Her husband, Raj, was vital; she emphasizes that family support is essential for working parents.
- Embrace Imperfection: Accept you can't be the perfect parent, spouse, and CEO all at once; guilt comes from pretending you can do it all flawlessly.

Practical Advice:

- Choose consciously: Don't let your days choose for you; be intentional about where you invest your time.
- Get help: Don't be afraid to ask for support from your partner, family, or employer.
- Be present: Give your full attention to the dimension of your life that needs you most at that moment.

Exercise

(2 mins per person)

'What does leadership mean to me?'

Home Exercise

Articulate your vision of yourself 5 years & 10 years down the line.

Create specific milestones (8-10) leading upto the vision.

What are the values that you hold and will continue to hold no matter what?

Where & when do you expect that you might have to choose between values and achieving your ambition?

Direction is more important than Speed!!!
